TWO CENTURIES UNDER A BAN OR THE ABOLITIONIST VINDICATED

A Touching Reminiscence Told of Edwin M. Stanton Giving an Insight Into the Greatness of His Soul.

All Rights Reserved by the Author, Chas. E. Lukens

It affords us pleasure in introducing to our readers, Judge Allan Coffin, of Nantucket, the Mecca of the Mayes and Coffins in America. His is four times a descendant of Thomas May, the illustrious Commonwealth and Puritan outcast. He has held prominent government positions. A reformer and a historian. It is an unwritten law of the May family that each generation of this family shall furnish at least one whose voice and pen would be heard in behalf of principles inseparable from life itself. In 1861, Lincoln declared in his inaugural address that he revered the Fugitive Slave Law and would punish its offenders as criminals. It is very doubtful if any de-

Hersey in Massachusetts was punishable by death from 1659 to 1861. Abolitionism was a capital offense in North Carolina. One of the voyagers that left their island home in 1771 was a girl that bore the name of Abigail, which means, "her father's pride." Well may she be called the Nation's pride. Abigail May became the grandmother of Edwin M. Stanton. The Stanton's emigrated to North Carolina in 1774.

When Stanton was eighteen years of age, he turned his back upon an Ohio college, an orphan, abolitionist lad, without means of his own and without friends to aid him in continuing his education, limited "as it was." If I mistake not, the doors of that college have ever since remained closed to all who are as poor as he. The writer would inaugurate a system of day colleges that would be the natural outgrowth of our high schools and afford all an equal chance. No better selection could have been made by Lincoln for Secretary of War than this representative of the seventh generation of Thomas May.

The charge was made by pygmies that Stanton was a Northerner with Southern sympathies. Every drop of blood that flowed in Stanton's veins was red. His ancestors in the South heeded the mandate of their sect as tenaciously as did his New England ancestors. Stanton might have, and perhaps did, break bread with representatives of the African race, but never with the feeling of consciousness that it was for any coercive service rendered his ancestors whose dust is mingling with the dust beneath the Southern skies.

The following will give some insight into the heart and soul of Stanton who for nearly two score of years was denied a hearing before the highest tribunal, the entire people.

In May, 1863, all male citizens who had not taken the oath of allegiance to the United States were required, under the penalty of punishment south of the federal lines, or death to do so before the first of June.

The Shaker community in Kentucky, being affected by the above addressed a petition to Lincoln in which they called to the attention of the President the fact that there was in the United States Treasury over $600,000, due the Shakers as pension funds not drawn by ex-soldiers of the Revolution and War of 1812, who had joined Shaker communities. They stated that in asking for immunity from drafts they were only asking for what had already been granted them by the Confederacy. Lincoln referred the matter to Stanton who replied as follows:

To the Provost Marshall, Bowling Green, Ky., Sir:—If there is any religious community within your district, whose conscientious scruples adjure war, or the payment of commutation fee, you will parole them indefinitely, still holding them subject to any demand from the authority here.

E. M. STANTON, Secretary of War.

(Signed) Washington, Dec. 30.

In October, 1867, Secretary Stanton visited Mt. Lebanon Shakers, and, in a meeting of the North family, after some very interesting reminiscences of Abraham Lincoln, made the following remarks: "Brethren and Sisters, in behalf of myself, wife and child, I return thanks for the love I have felt from you. This opportunity I count as being among the happiest moments of my life. I have had a busy life, but always tried to do the right in whatever office I have been called to fill. From my earliest recollections, you Shakers have been talked of in my father's house, and I always felt a desire to visit you. To Benjamin Gales, who will always be a brother of my heart, and to his elder brother, Frederick W. Evans, I am indebted for this privilege. They came to me in time of your distress and laid before me your condition. I understood the case, and after consulting the President, we acted according to your desire, and I have always been thankful that I could in any way befriend you. I hope your society will always prosper, that God's blessing may rest upon it and that you who have joined hands today may be reunited in the spirit land."

As the party left the room Elder Antoine Doolittle said to him: "We are thankful to you for remembering us in our affliction and we also pray for your prosperity." He stopped a moment, looked earnestly at her, then with great emotion and eyes filled with tears, said: "Sister, when my head was weary and my heart was heavy, the thought that the prayers of the righteous were ascending to heaven in my behalf was my solace. God bless you!"

There were other settlements of Abolitionists in the South, chiefly in Virginia. There was quite a settlement at Richmond. Though some hundreds of miles from the colony in North Carolina, these settlements were their nearest neighbors and with whom they intermarried. The Abolitionists did proselytizing in Southland. Members of prominent Southern families joined them, abolishing their slaves, of course, which occurred nearly a century before the war.

There are many descendants of Southern Abolitionists that have a good Southern blood coursing through their veins as any there is.

In the year 1816, David Macy and wife left their native home, New Garden, N. C., and found an asylum in Southwestern Ohio, fifty-five miles from Cincinnati, then a town of but few thousand inhabitants, their nearest trading point. They fled from the consciousness of the evils of negro slavery. Though relatives, friends and everything dear to them was left forever, they never murmured or complained of the hardships of pioneer life, but entered into the new life of Abolitionism in Ohio; the development of what may be termed the educational white belt of Ohio.

The maiden name of the wife was Dickie (or Dix). Her grandmother's maiden name was Lynch, of the family for whom Lynchburg was named. These names are familiar names throughout the South. Of their family, four were born in the South. The eldest was ten years of age, the youngest two, upon their arrival in Ohio. The latter was the grandfather of the writer. In a village in Southwestern Ohio, a prominent station upon the underground railroad, is a meeting house in the rear of which rests the dust of five generations of his family. It is an honor unpeakable to be a trustee of this property. Sacred is the memory of those whose dust is mingling with the dust of his native land. Sacred is the tradition of those whose dust is mingling with the dust beneath the Southern skies and upon an island in the seas. The same Eternal Spirit that guided them will guide their posterity through all time into eternity.

HOW RHEUMATISM IS CURED

Simplicity and Science Combine to Conquer Winter's Plague.

When Dr. Flood, the great Kidney, Bladder and Rheumatism specialist, wrote the now famous prescription for these diseases given below, he condensed great medical learning and skill into a remedy and method of treatment so simple, inexpensive and easily obtained that anyone can benefit by it.

The receipt in full as he wrote it, with his simple directions complete is as follows:

Fluid Extract Cascara Aromatic 1-2 ounces
Concentrated Barkola Compound 1 ounce
Aromatic Elixir 4 ounces
Mix these ingredients at home and take one teaspoonful after each meal and one at bedtime.

The object of this prescription is to soothe and heal the Kidneys and Bladder, reduce all inflammation, and stop the pain, but the doctor's instructions are that it must be persevered with for at least a week after the patient has been completely restored to health in order to make certain that every quick recovery may be also a lasting one.

Obituary

Ester Odessa Shambaugh, daughter of Philip and Mattie Shambaugh, was born in Hardin county, O., April 7, 1896. She died at her home in Marion, O., Oct. 28, 1907.

She was converted and joined the United Brethren church in Christ in Marion, O., Feb. 4, 1906. She was an active member of the Jr. Y. P. C. U. Sabbath school and church. Ester was a child of pleasing and kindly disposition, winning the hearts of those who formed her acquaintance. Her suffering was very painful which she bore patiently. Her closing moments were calm and peaceful as the closing moments of a beautiful summer day. We believe that the eyes which have closed to the scenes and sufferings of earth have opened amid the beautiful scenes of the heavenly city. She leaves a father, mother, sister and brother and many other relatives with a host of friends to mourn their loss.

Rev. L. C. Reed, who officiated at the funeral services spoke feelingly from the text, Zeck 8:5— "And the streets of the city shall be full of boys and girls playing in the streets thereof." In part he spoke as follows:

This prophecy refers to the restoration of Jerusalem. The completeness of the restoration is indicated by the picture presented to us in verses 4 and 5 of this prophecy.

A city would not be natural unless all ages in life is represented.

The kingdom of Jesus Christ has a special promise to the world. A very beautiful picture of the "Heavenly City" may be drawn by way of application.

The kingdom of Jesus presents a special promise of beauty to children.

Jesus said, "Suffer the little ones to come unto me and forbid them not for such is the kingdom of heaven."

The salvation of children seems more assured than adults. In early death they safely reach heaven. We need not express any doubt but can say with the Poet—

"Out of the shadows of sadness,
Into the sunshine of gladness,
Into the light of his love,
Out of a land very dreary,
Out of a world very weary,
Into the rapture of rest."

"Out of today's sin and sorrow
Into the blissful tomorrow,
Into a day without gloom,
Out of a land filled with sighing,
Land of the dead and the dying,
Into a land without tomb."

Carr's Trade Letter

Weekly review of grain trade conditions which are shaping prices prepared expressly for the Mirror by H. H. Carr & Company, Commission Merchants, 96 Board of Trade, Chicago, Ill., who possess unexcelled facilities for executing orders for future delivery, watch the correctness of the advices contained in this letter and act on them.

Chicago grain traders waked up to a new condition of things in bank circles Monday morning of this week. The associated banks of Chicago and nearly all of her western centers agreed to stand together and issue clearing house certificates for use between banks and it was also agreed to send as little money to the country as possible for grain or other provisions, and until the panic conditions which started with N. Y. banks and Wall street stocks would be at an end. The result has been great security to all western banking circles against any run of depositors and will in the end prove a very wise step in maintaining a return of general confidence.

At the end of the third day of the new system confidence is largely restored, declines in all markets are checked and very strong recovery was noted today in the entire grain market, cash and futures. Wheat prices have been put on a safer level for buyers. Foreigners have come after our wheat on the decline. Shipping sales of 700,000 bushels of wheat from Chicago houses were made in one day followed by similar sales of 500,000 bushels today. Banks and exporters are using every effort to start a flow of gold from London to this side in exchange for our grain. We believe wheat prices are at a level where both the investor and speculator can take hold and have very little time to wait for good profits on a strong advance. We wish to emphasize what we have said before about discretionary orders. We have heard from a number this week who like the idea, preferring to depend on our judgment rather than their own for the filling of orders at the best possible moment in the open market. Only two hundred orders of 25,000 each or one thousand of 5,000 bushels each would mean 5,000,000 bushels. Even one fifth of this amount would make us one of the largest factors in the market. Having such an aggregate of such orders to execute at an opportune time would insure a profit to all. Recent action of the market has greatly increased the chances of filling such orders to advantage and thousands of readers of these letters can easily do what a small number have already begun to do this week.

Corn shippers and corn raisers of this and other states very wisely decided to curtail shipments until the banking arrangements were more to their liking. The east appeared to get over its financial scare and came after a good supply of corn today. Cash prices were up 2c to 3c and futures had 2c recovery. There is wet weather over the corn shipping states. Lighter receipts are almost certain. Around 55c for December and 58c for May believe buyers can make no mistake in taking hold of corn.

It developed today that the bull leadership in oats is not dead. Local sellers who broke the market 1-2 cents in the beginning were punished by an advance of 5c later in the session. Keep in mind the short crop and buy a little of oats if you have the chance under 50c for May.

Court Happenings

Nora Cranmer was granted a divorce from her husband Harry Cranmer in the common pleas court by Judge Young, Thursday afternoon. The couple have no children. The plaintiff alleged that her husband had a right to beat her or choke her the eyes whenever she did anything that displeased him. She stated to the court that her husband claimed that she belonged to him and that he had a right to beat her or choke her at any time he chose to do so.

The court directed that the defendant, who did not contest the suit, be directed to pay $800 alimony to the plaintiff. The defendant has a half interest in a farm of eighty acres in Big Island township. DeGolley and DeGolley appeared for the plaintiff.
